

Alphabetical list of recorded deaths from unintentional carbon monoxide poisoning since 1st September 1995

If anyone has any comments, wishes to challenge an entry or add the details of a deceased person, please contact us at office@co-gassafety.co.uk.

All these deaths have been in the public domain but if anyone wishes us to remove a name from our website then of course we will do so. However, we hope that families and friends will understand that the reason for having a list of names is to bring it home to the authorities that those who have died of unintentional carbon monoxide poisoning were people with loved ones, not a mere list of statistics. We therefore hope that families and friends will not object to the naming of their loved ones. Indeed, many families of victims have told us that they look at our website as a lasting memorial.

Please bear in mind that we keep updating these lists as we receive further information (for example if we have been informed of the appliance concerned) and we update the website fully with our new list of data, usually in January each year. We no longer add fatal victim names to this list until accidental carbon monoxide poisoning has been recorded officially as the cause of death, usually at public inquest. In some cases, this may take more than a year or longer.

As far as we know all the deaths listed below were from unintentional carbon monoxide poisoning. We try to check every death with the Coroner concerned and most Coroners and their officers are very helpful. We are extremely grateful to them. We also confirm details of fatal incidents with other agencies such as the Health & Safety Executive, Marine Accidents Investigation Branch, Police and Fire & Rescue Services, the Solid Fuel Association and others as appropriate, to ensure we have as up-to-date and complete record as possible of all aspects of the events. Our thanks go to the officers and staff who help with this research.

British Citizens who Died Abroad

Deaths of British citizens in foreign countries are of interest to us, as we strive to raise awareness of unintentional carbon monoxide both at home and abroad. We do still try to confirm these deaths via an official agency, such as a UK coroner (if repatriated, victims will have a UK inquest) or the British Embassy, or local police in the country concerned. However, this can often prove difficult, particularly if some time has passed before we become aware of the death. Therefore, those victims whose surnames have a star (*) in the list below are those who we strongly suspect, from media reports, are the result of unintentional carbon monoxide poisoning but for whom we have no official documentation.
